The death of a child

We understand that the death of a child is one of the most devastating events that anyone may experience.

The pain may be greater than any other previously felt. Even at its most distressing, the pain of grief is a natural reaction at this time.

Sometimes the feelings can be so overwhelming that they make everyday living very difficult.

Surviving the extremes of grief can seem impossible for a long time. Family, friends and others may be an important source of support but sometimes people need extra help.

What do we offer?

A listening service that offers emotional support to all those affected by the death of a child.

An opportunity to talk in confidence to someone who has also experienced the death of a child.

Who can call?

Anyone affected by the death of a child of any age, from pre-birth to adult, under any circumstances, however recently or long ago.

“The Helpline offered the opportunity for me to talk openly about my son’s life and death. It was such a relief to talk to someone who recognised, accepted and reassured me that what I was going through was normal.”

We operate a confidential service under the code of practice of the Telephone Helplines Association.

When are we open?

The Helpline is open every day of the year, at the following times:

Monday to Sunday

19.00 to 22.00

Monday, Thursday and Friday

10.00 to 13.00

Tuesday and Wednesday

10.00 to 16.00

Who answers the calls?

The Helpline is staffed by volunteers. They are all bereaved parents who are trained and supported by professional staff.

The Helpline is not a counselling service. We can provide details of services in local areas.

Callers can be helped in their preferred language as we have the availability of an interpreting service.
